

A New Perpetual Almanac

A New Perpetual Almanac

The table is a circular perpetual almanac. The months are arranged around the perimeter of the circle, with the first letter of each month written in a larger font. The days of the month are written in smaller letters, and the numbers 1 through 31 are arranged in a grid in the center of the circle. The table is divided into four quadrants by a vertical and a horizontal line.
